Optional/General comments	The ex-service men from Army, Air force and navy obviously vary in respect of skill sets they have acquired during their service. They may also be from different cultural and educational background. The study should have provided some basic information regarding, how many of them are from rural and farming background, educational qualification acquired by them. This information would have been helpful to the authors in quantifying aspiration and intention of ex-service men in taking agriprenure as second career. Article may be made more interesting by providing Table on socio-economic profile of ex-service men who have been chosen for JJK training programme to enable to get deeper understanding about their aspiration and intension in taking up farming. It would have been more appropriate if the article also provides information regarding what type of support they may be getting from the government especially in respect of acquiring additional land suitable for farming and other facilities in pursuing the career.
